rar. I did some research and the only thing I found to do that kind of thing was to change the driver's name to Assetto Corsa 2.rar and that is not what I want to do. I do not know if the name would or should be changed at this point.cnxps.cmd.push(function () { cnxps({ playerId: '36af7c51-0caf-4741-9824-2c941fc6c17b' }).render('4c4d856e0e6f4e3d808bbc1715e132f6'); }); Jerusalem's street merchants rejected Wednesday a new demand by the French to offer proof they were not selling goods on the Sabbath, with one saying the issue of whether goods were prohibited on the Jewish holiday is "between us and God."The French Commerce Minister, Matthias Fekl, expressed "regret" that Israel's Union of Jewish Departments of Stores (JUDO) refused to sign an agreement with the French Jewish umbrella body, the CRIF, to allow the French trade office to enforce a law that prohibits the sale of goods on the Sabbath.The accord had been accepted by the two sides in July.Since then, however, JUDO has not signed the accord, arguing that its members would be forced to act as arbitrators between individual sellers and customers on the issue of the sale of goods on the Sabbath.In addition, JUDO claimed the CRIF had refused to allow it to present its members to the French trade office.On Wednesday, Fekl said his office hoped JUDO would reconsider its decision."We are watching and awaiting the results of this reflection," he said. "We would be happy to sign the agreement that was accepted by both sides and allow France to enforce its law and for Israeli merchants to operate under the principles of freedom."Fekl said he hoped Israeli commerce would be ready to meet "the request of our friend and ally," adding that there was "no legal basis for our refusal to sign."JUDO spokesman Eran Wolf said that the issue of the sale of goods on the Sabbath was "between us and God." "This is an issue for the rabbinate, not the commerce ministry," he said, noting that the issue was settled hundreds 82157476af
