... Kirkus Reviews "Marla Mason ... looks like she's having a fine old time. She's warm and funny and engaging, and her art is absolutely perfect for this tale ... I read the entire book in one sitting, and the book is better for it ... Every page of this book is fun, and Marla Mason's voice is absolutely charming ... It's a terrific read for fans of the space opera, but it's just as likely to have you laughing out loud." - Goodreads "As a young girl, Marla Mason recalls spending hours alone in her attic, watching Star Trek reruns and reading science fiction. Now a grown woman, she lives in a loft apartment in San Francisco with a husband, a best friend, a cat, and a collie named Jack. When the mailman delivers a CD from a publisher who wants to publish her first novel, Marla decides to do just that. What follows is a rollicking adventure through time and space with a main character who's not only a free spirit but also a scrappy underdog. And there are aliens. And there are spaceships. And there's romance. And then there's a near-fatal airplane crash. In fact, we think it might be safer to say there is all of that. A fun, quirky debut. A must read for readers who like the outer space stuff as much as the inner space stuff." - Chicago Review of Books References Category:American fantasy novels Category:2009 American novels Category:2009 fantasy novels Category:Science fiction fantasy novels import { createEventDispatcher, useEffect } from'svelte'; import { errorBoundary, call, wait, request, error, response, configure } from'svelte/transition'; function start() { return request.get('/api/start'); } function log(error) { console.error('[log]', error); export default { on: createEventDispatcher('start'), data() { return { error: null }; }, mounted 82157476af
